Ent's 65th Anniversary: How Our Past Still Shapes Our Future

March 7, 1957. The U.S. had 48 states and one new Colorado credit union: Ent. Ent Air Force Base leaders saw the importance of establishing a credit union to serve both the troops and the community.

Their vision was reflected in an early base newspaper article. "A Credit Union is as important as the vision of the people who organize it. It may be a means of combating high interest rates. It may be a convenient and human way of saving money and making loans at low rates. Or it may be the foundation of a better and fuller community life."

Written more than six decades ago, this still reflects who we are today. With almost 450,000 owner-members and more than 45 service centers, at first glance our founders might not recognize Ent. Looking closer, though, they'd see their original purpose thriving.

As a credit union, we're still able to put our owner-members – not profits – first.

This commitment also holds true in members' communities. Wherever there's an Ent Service Center, there's also a "fuller community life" with free financial education and philanthropic generosity.

Chief Executive Officer

While we'll continue to improve how you bank, one thing won't change. We'll stay true to our founders' commitment to serve. At Ent, our owner-members will always come first.

Home Equity Line of Credit

Borrowing Flexibility for Big Dreams: Home Equity Line of Credit (HELOC)

Is a big expense coming your way? Is it time to finally update your kitchen or consolidate some debt? A HELOC can be a good solution. HELOCs let you borrow against the available equity in your home. That's why they generally offer lower rates than an unsecured loan, like a credit card. HELOCs are also typically flexible. So you can borrow only what you need when you need it.

Use for any big expense

Pay for home improvements

Use for that special vacation

Consolidate debt with lower rates

Pay for college

Scam Alert: What to Watch Out For

Scammers are smart. Fortunately, their tricks are common knowledge. And knowing them can help you protect yourself. Perhaps the best thing to remember is this: The government and your credit union/bank typically won't call you. As a rule, they'll send an email or a letter if they need to reach you.

It May Be a Scam If:

- You've never heard of the organization, product or credit card being offered.
- You're asked to wire money.
- You're asked to give sensitive info, like your bank account or Social Security number, over the phone.
- The person won't take no for an answer.
- The person threatens to fine or report you to the government/credit bureau.

If you suspect a scam, contact Ent and all your financial institutions. We're here to help. For more security tips, check out Ent.com/EducationCenter.
